Preamble & Introduction

Stewardship code is a set of principles or guidelines aimed primarily at institutional investors, who hold shares, and thus, voting rights in companies. Implying that it is part of the fiduciary duty of investors to behave as good owners of companies, stewardship codes require investors to monitor and, where necessary, engage with companies on material matters, including environmental, social, governance, strategy, performance and risk issues and to vote their shares at company AGMs and EGMs. It also includes the matters on strategy, performance, risk, capital structure, and corporate governance, including culture and remuneration.

Companies and investors have a symbiotic existence: companies need investors, as much as investors need companies. Consequently, effective stewardship and effective governance go together. For a company to be able to act in the investors' best interest, it also needs to understand the investors' perspective. The stewardship code sets out a framework that encourages the investors to engage with companies they have invested in and their boards. This benefits both, the companies and the investors.

Stewardship codes are being introduced globally. After the UK adopted a Stewardship Code in 2009, about eight other countries have similarly mandated stewardship requirements, including a few Asian countries such as Malaysia, Japan, and Taiwan. Singapore and South Korea, have set up working groups to develop stewardship codes. Under the umbrella of a stewardship code, investors have been able to achieve different agendas – from getting more independent directors on boards, to ensuring that annual reports are being published in time.

Annexure 1: The seven principles of stewardship code outlined by the IRDAI

1. Formulate a policy on the discharge of stewardship responsibilities and publicly disclose it
2. Have a publicly-disclosed clear policy on managing conflicts of interest in fulfilling stewardship responsibilities
3. Monitor investee companies
4. Have a clear policy on intervention in their investee companies
5. Have a publicly-disclosed clear policy for collaboration with other institutional investors, where required, to preserve the interests of the policyholders (ultimate investors)
6. Have a clear policy on voting and disclosure of voting activity
7. Report periodically on stewardship activities

India, to a large degree, has relied on regulations to evolve its corporate governance agenda. The more recent regulations have balanced this agenda by empowering the shareholders to assert their rights – in the form of more convenient voting processes, and requisite specific approvals in the case of related party transactions. However, these measures are effective only on specific issues. To build a wholistic environment that rewards good governance practices, the institutional investors must undertake focused stewardship activities.

While the Securities and Exchange Board of India has long since mandated mutual funds to vote on shareholder resolutions, the Insurance Regulatory Authority of India (“IRDAI”) on March 22, 2017 prescribed stewardship principles to be adopted and implemented by the insurers (“Stewardship Principles”). Insurers are required to adopt a policy based on the Stewardship Principles on or prior to September 21, 2017.

Stewardship Code

Stewardship aims to promote the long-term success of investee companies in such a way that the ultimate providers of capital also prosper. Effective stewardship benefits investee companies, insurers/Insurer / Asset Managers, investors, policyholders’ and enhances the quality of capital markets.

- c) Escalation: In case there is no progress despite the first two steps, IFLI shall escalate the matter to the Committee. If the Committee decides to escalate, IFLI shall engage with the board of the investee company (through a formal written communication) and elaborate on the concerns. The decision to purchase more equity or sell all or part of the IFLI's investment in the investee company shall be made by the Committee, which may consider the outcome of the intervention as an input in its decision-making process.

Annex: IRDAI's Stewardship Principles

Principle 1: Insurers should formulate a policy on the discharge of their stewardship responsibilities and publicly disclose it.

Stewardship activities include monitoring and engaging with companies on matters such as strategy, performance, risk, capital structure, and corporate governance, including culture and remuneration.

The policy should clearly define the stewardship responsibilities as identified by the insurer and how it intends to fulfill the same to enhance the wealth of its clients. The policy should disclose how the insurer applies stewardship with the aim of enhancing and protecting the value for the ultimate beneficiary or client.

In case some of the activities are outsourced to some external service providers, the policy should provide the responsibilities to be delegated to such service providers and the mechanisms to ensure that the overall stewardship responsibilities are carried out seamlessly.

Principle 2: Insurers should have a clear policy on how they manage conflicts of interest in fulfilling their stewardship responsibilities and publicly disclose it

Insurers should put in place, maintain and publicly disclose a policy for identifying and managing conflicts of interest with the aim of taking all reasonable steps to put the interests of their client or beneficiary first. The policy should also address how matters are handled when the interests of clients or beneficiaries diverge from each other.

Principle 3: Insurers should monitor their investee companies

Insurers should have mechanisms for regular monitoring of their investee companies in respect of their performance, leadership effectiveness, succession planning, corporate governance, reporting and other parameters they consider important.

Insurers may or may not wish to be made insiders (actively involved with the investee companies). An insurer who may be willing to become an insider should indicate in its stewardship statement the willingness to do so, and the mechanism by which this could be done.

Insurers will expect investee companies and their advisers to ensure that information that could affect their ability to deal in the shares of the company concerned is not conveyed to them without their prior agreement.

Principle 4: Insurers should have a clear policy on intervention in their investee companies

Insurers should set out the circumstances in which they will actively intervene and regularly assess the outcomes of doing so. Intervention should be considered regardless of whether an active or passive investment policy is followed. In addition, a low volume of investment is not, in itself, a reason for not intervening. Instances when insurers may want to intervene include, but are not limited to, when they have concerns about the company's strategy, performance, governance, remuneration or approach to risks, including those that may arise from social and environmental matters.

The meetings should be held in a confidential manner with the view to resolve the issue constructively. If dissatisfied with the response of the investee company, the insurer may decide to escalate the matter, in accordance with the pre-defined policy.

Principle 5: Insurers should have a clear policy for collaboration with other institutional investors, where required, to preserve the interests of the policyholders (ultimate investors), which should be disclosed

For issues that require larger engagement with the investee company, institutional investors may choose to act collectively in order to safeguard the interests of their investors. For such situations, the insurers should have a policy to guide their actions and extent of engagement.

Principle 6: Insurers should have a clear policy on voting and disclosure of voting activity

Insurers should not just blindly support the board of the investee company but, instead, take their own voting decisions to promote the overall growth of the investee companies and, in turn, enhance the value of their investors.

The voting policy should be publicly disclosed. The voting decisions taken in respect of all the investee companies should also be disclosed publicly along with the rationale.

Insurers should disclose the use made, if any, of proxy voting or other voting advisory services. They should describe the scope of such services, identify the providers and disclose the extent to which they follow, rely upon or use recommendations made by such services.

Insurers should disclose their approach to stock lending and recalling lent stock.

Principle 7: Insurers should report periodically on their stewardship activities

In addition to the regular fulfilment of their stewardship activities, institutional investors should also provide a periodic report to their ultimate beneficiaries (policyholders) of how they have discharged their responsibilities, in a format which is easy to understand.

However, it may be clarified that compliance with the aforesaid principles does not constitute an invitation to manage the affairs of a company or preclude a decision to sell a holding when this is considered in the best interest of clients or beneficiaries.
